

contributor
JEREMY OSTER

Born, raised and educated in London, Jeremy Oster moved to the U.S. in the late 1980s, eventually landing in the storied town of Aspen, Colorado. It was there that he entered the jewelry business. After successfully establishing a reputation for expertise selling fine watches and jewelry from big-name brands at a leading store, Jeremy was recruited to manage and develop another store in town - Hochfield Jewelers - located in The Little Nell at the base of Aspen Mountain. During his tenure, Jeremy grew Hochfield into one of the most notable watch and jewelry boutiques in the country, where he was known for introducing many of the emerging independent watchmakers that today are the most highly sought-after amongst watch collectors and enthusiasts. While there, Jeremy also specialized in the rarest of vintage watches from the most famous manufacturers ranging from the 1890's through 1960's.

Ultimately, Jeremy's time in Aspen led him to his eventual wife, Melissa. In 2002, the couple moved to Denver, where they founded their eponymous boutique, Oster Jewelers, in the heart of Cherry Creek North with the clear goal of bringing the very finest watches and jewelry to the Mile High City.

Today, Oster Jewelers is highly respected throughout the watch industry for leading the way, introducing many of the most exciting emerging independent watchmakers and jewelers to a global following. And while the brand's clientele spans the globe, including Australia, China, Japan, Dubai, Monaco, Philippines, Saudi Arabia and the UK and throughout Europe, Oster Jewelers continues to offer Denver a window into the artisanal world of the finest craftsmen anywhere.

Additionally, Jeremy is the host of Oster Jewelers' podcast, Keeping Time, which reaches a global audience within the industry as well as clients and collectors everywhere.

Read Jeremy's extensive insight in Time Zone (page 26).

+ MORE VIA osterjewelers.com